FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

What is worker's compensation?

Worker's compensation is insurance that handles claims for work-related injuries. It also provides approximately 66% (two-thirds) of an employee's income (with a salary cap) while they are away from work due to a work-related injury.

An employee was injured on the job. What do I need to do?

Report the incident to their immediate supervisor as soon as possible. The supervisor on duty at the time of the injury is responsible for investigating the scene, ensuring the injured receive prompt medical attention, and addressing any safety hazards that may have caused or contributed to the injury.

Until the employee reports the injury and the claim form is returned to Risk Management, we are under no obligation to provide them with benefits. A common mistake is waiting to report the injury until it becomes unbearable and they can no longer work. Prompt reporting and immediate medical care ensures that the workers' compensation benefits aren't delayed while they are off work with no income.

Is an employee considered an active employee while out on worker's compensation?

While an employee is away from work due to a work-related injury or illness, their status will be leave of absence. Once the doctor releases them to return to work, they will return to active status.

Can an employee use Sick Leave instead of worker's compensation?

Yes they have the option of using their sick leave while out on workers' compensation. However sick leave used is not reimbursed. Also, they are not able to use annual leave.

Can an employee use the Sick Leave Pool/ FMLA/Short Term Disability instead of worker's compensation?

Unfortunately, the only options available for injured employees are workers compensation benefits or the use of their sick leave if available.

How should an employee injured on the job be coded while out of work?

If the employee elected to use sick leave they would be coded using their sick time. If they elected worker's compensation benefits Risk Management will instruct you to code them as IJ (Injury on the Job). The IJ code will prevent them from receiving both worker's compensation benefits and district pay, as they are not eligible to receive both. If an employee is coded incorrectly this will result in them getting double pay, loss of sick time, and owing money to the district.

What do I do if an employee receives a bill from a doctor?

If it has been determined that their work-related injury/illness claim is compensable, you should forward any medical bills to Risk Management who will evaluate the bill for payment. They should have no out of pocket expense.

Do I have to seek treatment from a doctor or the district doctor?

An employee does not have to go for treatment if they choose not to. If an employee goes for treatment without proper authorization the bill WILL NOT be covered. Also, if they wish to be treated by their own physician, they will be using their own insurance and pay for any treatments themselves.
