A few tips on how parents can communicate with their children about coronavirus.

As public conversations around coronavirus disease 2019 (COVID-19) increase, children may worry about themselves, their family, and friends getting ill with COVID-19. Parents, family members, school staff, and other trusted adults can play an important role in helping children make sense of what they hear in a way that is honest, accurate, and minimizes anxiety or fear. CDC has created guidance to help adults have conversations with children about COVID-19 and ways they can avoid getting and spreading the disease.

General principles for talking to children

1. Remain calm and reassuring.

Remember that children will react to both what you say and how you say it. They will pick up cues from the conversations you have with them and with others.

2. Make yourself available to listen and to talk.

Make time to talk. Be sure children know they can come to you when they have questions.

3. Avoid language that might blame others and lead to stigma.

Remember that viruses can make anyone sick, regardless of a person's race or ethnicity. Avoid making assumptions about who might have the virus.
