How to Write a Fashion Show Script

BRIDGETTE REDMAN UPDATED ON AUGUST 30, 2017

Long before the spotlights; long before the fancy gowns fall over the heads of models and long before the oohs and ahhs of the audience comes the writing of the fashion show script. This script pulls everything together to help the show go off without a hitch. As the organizing document, it tells when each model must step onto the catwalk and provides the content the emcee uses to describe each creation. Writing a fashion show script requires research, vivid writing, organization and good storytelling.

Analyzing the Garments

Fashion show script writing begins with solid research and careful thought. Spend time with each of the garments to find out what makes them special. Investigate what they are made of, what is fashionable about the cut, what its function is and how it is meant to be worn. Learn whether it belongs to a particular genre and what is new and different about it. Identify the designer for each garment and dig up the story behind the inspiration for it.

Putting It All Together

Start the script with an introduction that talks about the show's purpose -- whether it is a fundraiser, highlighting a particular brand or following a specific theme. Welcome the audience. Organize outfits into runs and put the descriptions in the proper order. Double-check with organizers to ensure the script matches the order of model appearance. Some fashion shows will have entertainment or guest speakers between runs, mark such elements in your script. At the end of the show, include the emcee's closing speech along with any thank yous to models, designers or sponsors.

Formatting the Script

Find out how the emcee wants the script structured -- whether she can read it from a hand-held tablet or from hard copy. Put the name of the outfit in bold or all caps with the name of the designer and model immediately after it. Leave a space and then include the description you wrote. You may choose to put key facts in bold for easier reading. Break up your descriptions into short paragraphs so they are easy to read. Read the script aloud to ensure it flows and follows the time sequences. Adjust as necessary.

The first thing to remember is that runway fashion shows are used to sell clothing so you want to write a description that really highlights the clothing, and the best way possible you want to highlight the style is it good for a certain body type it's an on-trend with certain colors, and most importantly why is it that it's on the runway in the first place.

There has to be a reason why that garment was picked so make sure you highlight all the key elements of that garment, and make sure you also highlight the brand or the designer so let's take a look at an example let's take a look at our lovely model Sloane with this blouse and leggings from gap this pink color goes great with our skin tone and the ruffles and the movement allow her to have a ton of fun
